

Supporting providers with a holistic approach

With an estimated 3.2 million shortage in health care staff by 2026, finding efficiencies while maintaining high-quality patient care is more challenging now than ever. Providers are facing a higher patient load with less staff support. Optum® services at the point of care helps them and their patients through in-person support, insights on patient prioritization and increased reimbursement accuracy.

Optum works with clinicians and their staff to identify their unique needs and offers solutions and support to eliminate administrative burdens and barriers. That means they can spend more time with patients despite having less office staff resources.

Attend the webinar on November 10 to download the full e-book and learn more about how Optum offers customized support to providers.
